PHILIPSBURG.

The Subscriber having agreed with JAMES ROSS, Esq. of Pittsburgh, for the purchase of his real property, on the west bank of the Ohio River, opposite WELLSBURG, will offer for SALE, on the Second Monday in November next, the

Lots in said Town,

By him laid out upon the Premises.

The Terms of Sale will be as follows, viz.

PAYMENT to be made in three equal annual instalments from the time of Sale, without interest, with an allowance of a discount of eight per cent for prompt payment—bond with good personal security to be given by the purchaser, payable to the proprietor's agent, Thomas Johnston, in the Old Bank of Steubenville, or in some convenient Bank on the western waters, which may be hereafter named for that purpose.

Upon receiving payment for any Lot or Lots sold, Mr. Ross will execute conveyances for the same of a good and indisputable estate—for this purpose the conveyances will be deposited in the Bank, to be taken away by the purchaser upon making his payments.

The right of having or keeping a FERRY, will be reserved to the proprietor.

It is believed that no property of the kind has been offered for sale upon the western waters possessing more natural or accidental advantages. It is situated on the bank of Ohio, opposite Wellsburgh, in the centre of perhaps the richest and best improved body of lands within several hundred miles of it; in a healthy climate, and in the vicinity of towns that have flourished, and are now flourishing, but in which unimproved property is holden at so high a price, as to prevent the lower, and most useful classes of society from holding.

WELLSBURGH has long been the largest exporting town within a great distance, of articles the growth of the country. The settlement is filled with Mills and Mill-seats, abounds with Coal and excellent Water. The Town offered for sale can be supplied in the dryest season, with spring water of the first quality, sufficient for the population of a large city.

A public road is now laying out from the city of Pittsburgh direct to this place, which it is believed will furnish the shortest route from that city to Smithfield, through Cadiz and Cambridge to Zanesville, and also through Mountpleasant to Zanesville.

An act of incorporation has passed the Assembly of Virginia, for Turnpiking both that road, and another to Washington, to go into effect when the Assembly of Pennsylvania shall pass similar laws. No doubt is entertained that the road from Washington will be provided for at the next session, and the work commenced in the ensuing year These roads will make Wellsburgh and the New Town the principal thoroughfare of travelling from east to west, and from west to east, connected as they will be with the eastern and northern states through Pittsburgh, and with the middle states by the great Cumberland road at Washington.

Persons desiring to purchase property in the proposed Town, would do well to remember the success of those who, at the time of their respective establishments, purchased town property in Steubenville, Smithfield, Cadiz, &c. Such has been the rise in value of the property. It cannot be doubted that the same success will attend those who may purchase in the town now proposed for sale.

The articles of agreement between the subscriber and Mr. Ross, will be shewn on the day of sale and the particular terms of public sale be more clearly stated by the Agent.

EXTRACTS FROM THE JOURNAL OF A VOYAGE TO THE MEDITERRANEAN.

Chapter III.

Then walks the father of the tempest forth.
THOMPSON.

On Wednesday morning the vessel was surrounded by a school of porpoises; they were seen for a short time sporting on the surface of the water and then disappeared steering away rapidly northward & eastward. These manoeuvres are in conformity with the singular habits of these animals. When the ocean is smooth they are to be seen bounding along its surface—rising above and plunging below it,—with an activity and playfulness but little in conformity with their heavy and sluggish appearance. They are also said to possess the power of anticipating the changes of the weather, and previously to a storm are supposed to direct their course towards the point from whence the wind is about to blow.

Black and heavy clouds began now to lower about us on all sides, and presented every indication of a rapidly approaching storm. The vigilant eye of the experienced seamen soon discovered the danger that threatened, and every nerve was exerted to avert it. The topsails were close reefed, all the other sails taken in, and the vessel layed to close to the wind.

"The sailors now to give the ship relief,
Reduce the topsails by a double reef,
Each lofty yard with slacken'd cordage reels,
Rattle the creaking blocks and ringing wheels,
Down the tall masts the topsails sink amain,
And now reduc'd resume their posts again."

The prudence of these precautions were now exemplified. About three o'clock P. M. a tremendous squall struck us; the topsails could no longer be carried and were furled, and the main storm-stay-sail was set. Circumstances which we had deemed peculiarly unfortunate, now providentially, turned to our advantage. Our crew was miserably bad—greatly deficient in numbers, and still more so in activity and skill—in short, they were mostly landsmen and boys. We had two Lieutenants, both of them were sick and no sailing master; and our gallant little brig was laden more deeply than was either safe or convenient. But the certainty of danger, suggested a degree of prudence, which perhaps under other circumstances would have been neglected. The topmasts were struck, and even the lower yards secured upon deck—an uncommon precaution—but which in the end saved us. For about three hours the wind blew with a fury that it is impossible to describe; the rain poured down in torrents and the wind and waves howled in dreadful concert.

I had gone below in the beginning of the storm and was sleeping very comfortably, when I was awakened by a tremenduous surge which almost threw me out of my birth. Upon opening my eyes I scarcely knew whether to smile or to shudder:

To laugh were want of goodness and of grace,
But to be grave exceeds all power of face."

A heavy sea had struck the vessel on one side and had thrown her nearly on her beam-ends; every thing in the ward-room—chairs, tables, trunks, and lob-lolly boys were thrown into one promiscuous heap, while the water was rushing in torrents down the hatchway. The Purser, who was in his birth opposite to me, waked at the same time, and in the first moments of surprise we stared at each other in mute astonishment; while the boys, scrambling in the water to rid themselves of the lumber in which they were entangled, roared lustily. In the midst of the scene stood our first Lieutenant, who after several hours fatigue had stepped below to refresh himself,—drenched to the skin, with a glass of grog in one hand and holding fast by the bulk-head with the other—he stood laughing immoderately at our situation.—Between the fear of being drowned in bed, on the one hand—and the excitement to risibility on the other, I remained for a moment, in statu quo. "Hurra soldier," said the sea officer "you are not aboard of a fort now—turn out—you never saw such a sight in your life." Accordingly I got up, and went on deck to behold. what was yet a novelty to me, a storm at sea.

"A change it was
That dazzled, not delighted me; a scene
Of novelties, that quickly ceased to charm."

The utter darkness of the night, for such it was by this time, the roaring of the waves which ever and anon broke completely over us—the commands of the officer conveyed through a trumpet which gave his stentorian voice a hoarse and sepulchral tone,—the curses of some, and the groans of others, of the men,—the creaking of the joints of the timber which seemed to announce their separation—in short, the variety of harsh and discordant sounds, added to the darkness—gave me no pleasing sensation. I ventured to inquire of capt. K his opinion of our situation—it was given in a few words—he had done every thing that could be done—the guns had been loosed from their lashings and were ready to be launch'd into the ocean—the carpenter stood with his axe to the main mast ready to hew it down at a moments warning—yet if the tempest did not abate there was but little hope.

"You wanted to see a storm"—said K—alluding to a wish I had expressed the day before—"Yes," said I—"and my curiosity is completely satisfied."

It was a scene that I should think myself presumptuous in attempting to describe—and perhaps it is fortunate that it is so, for if it were possible for me to succeed in the attempt, there are few who would not doubt my veracity.

The following has been handed to us, with a request that we would give it publicity.

(Copy)

Navy Department, Sep. 29, 1817.

Sir.—I transmit to you herewith a copy of the sentence of the General Court Martial, convened at Erie, Pa. for your trial, upon charges preferred by Lieut. Wish.

It is highly satisfactory to the Navy Department, that an officer of your rank and meritorious services should be honorably acquitted, upon charges seriously affecting your character, and by the unanimous decision of a respectable court.

You will immediately resume the command of the Naval station at Erie.

I am very respectfully, sir, your most obdt. servant
BENJAMIN HOMANS.

By order of the Secretary of the Navy.
Capt. Daniel S. Dexter,
Comdng. Nav. Officer, Erie, Pa.

Sentence of a general Court Martial convened at the house of John Dixon, in the borough of Erie (state of Pennsylvania) September 11th, 1817, agreeable to an adjournment from the U. S. brig Niagara, laying in the said harbour, for the trial of Daniel S. Dexter, Esquire, a master commandant in the Navy of the United States, on charges and specification of charges, exhibited against him by John A. Wish, Esquire a Lieutenant in the Navy.

September 16th 1817, 9 o'clock, A. M.

The Court met agreeable to adjournment, the President, members and acting Judge advocate all present. Capt. Dexter having delivered and read his defence.—The court pronounced the following sentence.

The court after maturely deliberating on the testimony in support of the charges & specifications of charges, preferred against D. S. Dexter, master commandant U. S. Navy, by Lieutenant Wish, unanimously acquit him in a full and honorable manner, it not appearing to said court that any censure should attach to his conduct as commanding officer.

The court unanimously concur in opinion, that the good of the service requires the removal of certain officers, who, united by factious feelings, have endeavoured to destroy the character of their commander, by such steps as are calculated to bring odium on the service and to produce insubordination 'tis highly important should be discountenanced.

The court feel the necessity of recommending this measure from the bad footing on which these officers appear to be on with the citizens of Erie, when it was their duty to have cultivated a good and friendly understanding, and to have taken no steps whereby social intercourse could have been destroyed.

The court viewing in a most odious light, anonymous and secret communications, made to destroy the character and reputation of a man, and considering the authors of such, as cowardly calumniators, cannot but feel a solemn regret that any officer and applicant for the command of this station, should have perused such a communication against his commander containing the basest libels, without making known to that officer that he had seen such communications and warned him against the insiduous attack of an assassin.

The court consider him bound so to do, not only from duty, but by that sacred tie of fraternity which binds men of high and honorable feelings embarked in the profession of arms, in the defence of their country.

R. T. SPENCE,
President of the court.

RALPH MARLIN,
acting Judge Advocate.

CANNON FOUNDRY AT NEWBURG.

This establishment has but recently got into operation and is now found to exceed the most sanguine expectations—It is an interesting fact, that the ore used is of such unusual good quality as to admit iron field pieces to be reduced considerably below the weight of brass European field pieces of the same calibre. Repeated trials have been made, which have demonstrated this fact. The expense of iron ordnance is less than one third that of brass, and then, they are much more durable; hence the immense saving in apparatus. The bed of ore is inexhaustable, and very conveniently situated. This establishment on the navigable waters of the Hudson, must be viewed as an important national acquisition.

N. Y. Columbian.

A late Paris paper contains the following article:—M. Leopold, an old Advocate at Paris, has just published a little volume, the title of which will sufficiently prove its importance and utility. This precious work is called 'Le Livre des Epoux,' or the means by which every class of society may become happy in marriage; in which are shown all the causes that produce miserable unions, and lead to, or maintain disorder and dissention in families; and in which are, at the same time disclosed, the method of properly assorting husbands and wives—of making them faithful to each other—of averting or curing jealousy—of expelling captiousness, quarrels, divisions and hatreds—and of securing the enjoyment in wedlock of concord and felicity.' Such a title is more than a sufficient recommendation; the more especially when it is known that Le Livre des Epoux, contains more than that little promises. It unfolds at one and the same time the inconveniences which result from marrying a handsome wife—the advantages that accompany an ugly wife—the comforts that are to be found in a rich wife—the risks that are run with a young wife—the tranquility that may be enjoyed with an old wife—the contradiction to which a man subjects himself who choses a wit—finally, the annoyances for which he must be prepared should he select a fool, a coquette, or a woman of gallantry. By following M. Leopold's counsels, one may be quite sure of escaping any unfortunate family connection or accident.

IRISH MANUFACTURE.

Three men and a woman have been committed to Wexford jail, who were detected in the neighborhood of Enniscorthy in the act of manufacturing leaves of alder, birch &c. so as to resemble the various kinds of tea imported from China. About two hundred weight of this deleterious article, together with the sheets and blankets used in the process of drying, were lodged in the custom house stores.

We find from the Papers, that the Holy Alliance has been vigorously attacked by some German writers, who publish their lucubrations in Switzerland. The Imperial and Royal Members of this Association will allow them to go on. Their principles, if they are really good, cannot suffer in the contest. It was finely said by Dr. Johnson, to a person, who complained that his enemies had "written him down.—"Then," said the Sage, "you must mend your manners, and live them down." One of the first fruits of the Holy Alliance ought to be a free Press in every State, leaving the question of a libel to a Jury. [Ledger.

From the European Magazine, for 1787.

Dr. Johnson's opinion of war.—Johnson thought very well of Lord Kaime's Elements of Criticism; of other of his writings he thought very indifferently, and, laughed very much at his opinion, that war was a good thing occasionally, as so much valour and virtue was exhibited in it. A fire, says Johnson, might, as well be thought a good thing; there is the bravery and address of the firemen employed in extinguishing it; there is much humanity exerted in saving the lives and properties of the poor sufferers; yet says he, after all this, who can say fire is a good thing.

Durability of the Cypress.

The unperishable chests which contains the Egyptian mumies, were of cypress. The gates of St. Peter's Church, at Rome, which lasted from the time of Constantine to that of Pope Eugene the Fourth. that is to say, 1100 years, were of cypress, and had in that time suffered no decay. According to Thucydides, the Athenians buried the bodies of their heroes in coffins of cypress, as not being subject to decay. A similar durability has also been ascribed to cedar.

A GORMANDIZER.—On Saturday a man long distinguished for the voracity of his appetite, died shortly after exhibiting his powers for the gratification of some persons who had betted on his head. This man was called "Mutton eating Bandy Billy," and resided in the parish of Newington. This fellow has repeatedly devoured at one meal, a leg of mutton weighing 10lbs. two large bunches of turnips, with a proportionate quantity of bread, and drinking a gallon of porter. On Friday night he repeated his favourite supper, the expense of which was defrayed by some Amateurs, who had laid some considerable bets on his digestive faculties; but Nature refus'd to assist the glutton: for in the morning he was found dead in his bed, occasioned by his over-night's gorge. He was well known in the county of Surry.—(London paper.)

Valuable Real estate for sale.

PURSUANT to the last Will and Testament of the late Col. RICHARD BROWN, deceased I NOW OFFER FOR SALE,

The Farm on which he resided,

On the Ohio River, in Holliday's Cove, in Brook County, Virginia.

This Estate consists of about 700 Acres of Land, 250 of which is a rich Island, the remainder principally second bottom and upland; that part of the upland which is not tillable, is covered with timber suitable for furnishing the Island and tillable part with fencing and building timber. There is between 150 and 200 acres cleared and under cultivation, a suitable proportion of which in good meadow land. The buildings consist in two log dwelling houses and a log barn with under story of stone. It is well supplied with very fine springs of good water.

The situation of this property on the Ohio River, five miles from the flourishing Town of Steubenville, and in the neighbourhood of several Merchant Mills, Iron Works, &c. renders it a desirable object to a person who would wish to farm extensively, as he would probably at all times find a good market at his door for the produce of his farm. A part of the purchase will be required in hand, and for the remainder a reasonable credit will be given.

PITTSBURGH.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1817.

☞ The communication of P. was received at too late an hour for insertion in this day's paper. It shall appear in our next.

We have not received all the official returns of the late election: but expect to be able to publish them on Friday.

The Legislature of Pennsylvania will convene on the first Tuesday in December. The Session of Congress commences on the first Monday in December.

An Albany paper states, that the number of emigrants, from the eastward, who have passed through that city since the first of September, is supposed to have exceeded the average of 500 per week.

Michigan University.—We learn from the Detroit paper, that the citizens of that city have set out with spirit to establish a university. A subscription was opened and upwards of $1000 subscribed the first day. The buildings have already been commenced, and the first half is expected to be complete the present autumn.

Something Remarkable.—At the dinner of the Agricultural Society at Brighton, were produced some black morocco leather and a pair of lady's shoes, which were manufactured from the skin of a Goat, which was alive the same day in Charlestown. The animal was killed, stripped of his skin, which was curried and tanned, and a pair of shoes made from it in less than 12 hours.

A letter from Marseilles of June 26th, speaking of the arrival of the Cleopatra's barge, says. "No vessel has ever attracted so much attention; more than 50,000 people have visited her since she entered the Freights. The appearance of this vessel in Europe has the same effect as an enchanted palace; the Europeans are perfectly astonished: it has completely established the reputation of the Americans as being the best ship builders in the world."

"It is reported that Lucien Bonaparte has arrived at Salem on board the Cleopatra. We sincerely hope that it is true. The man who could refuse a proffered throne, and who in time of danger, could not resist the voice of nature and the call of his country, is worthy of the homage due to virtue. L'Abeille Americaine.

Loaves and Fishes.—The Albany Gazette asserts the prevalence of a report, that Vice-President TOMPKINS has it in contemplation to resign the dull office of Vice-President; in expectation of being appointed to the more active and more lucrative office of Collector of the Port of New-York!

From the New-York Spectator of Oct. 20.

INTERNAL IMPROVEMENTS.

A general meeting of the inhabitants of Steuben county, and of the country on or near the Seneca and Crooked Lake, was held on Monday the 22d of September, for the purpose of co-operating with a company now forming for the transportation of merchandize from the city of New-York to Pittsburgh. It is stated, that the canal of the Seneca Falls will be completed in the month of December next, when Geneva and Hopeton will be accessible by an uninterrupted water communication from Schenectady. The distance by land from the end of this water communication to Hamilton at the junction of the Olean with the Allegheny river, is not yet precisely ascertained. The Bath and Angelica turnpike road will however, form a part of the route, and the state road from Angelica to Hamilton will constitute another part of it. The former will be finished in the course of the present season; and the latter has been open several years, and is already greatly travelled.

The meeting we understand was numerous and animated. Three commissioners were appointed to explore the different routes to the head of the Crooked Lake; and were directed to report to the chairman, Col. Troop, as soon as they shall have finished the survey. Col Troop is authorised, as soon as he hears from the commissioners, to call another general meeting to consider the report, and to decide on the proper route for a turnpike from Bath and Angelica to the head of Crooked Lake: and also to adopt measures to obtain from the Legislature an act of incorporation for the new turnpike. The stock, it is believed will be taken up immediately, and the road made without delay.

These measures, when completed, will, no doubt, be of immense importance to the commercial interests of this city; as goods may be then transported from New-York, to Pittsburgh, at considerable less expence than from Philadelphia, over the Mountains to the same place.

MORE OF THE VERMONT IMPOSTORS.

FROM THE VIRGINIA PATRIOT.

MR. EDITOR.

I noticed in one of your late papers some account of several pilgrims who were then in New Jersey, on their way from Woodstock, Vermont, to the South. Their pilgrimage, it appears, commenced in Lower Canada, I believe in May or June last; in which province, it is understood, they had just before been tried, before one of the King's court's on a charge of murdering one of their children; or in other words, administering to it a decoction from a poisonous bark, by command of the Lord. Although the proof of the fact was not of that positive character which a conviction for murder demanded, yet so fully convinced were the Canadians of their guilt, that A MARCH became, as it is said, the last resort of this new sect.

At Woodstock, in the state of Vermont, they successively arrived, and tarried several weeks—made some proselytes, and otherwise added to their numbers. Beneath the roof of a Christian preacher, their devout professions procured them a hospitable protection; and so incessant were their professed addresses to and communications with invisible beings, with whom they pretended at times to hold converse, in the most unmeaning gibberish; added to their dirty caps, bearskin girdles, and long beards, their fame went abroad, and not a few visiters, (among whom was the writer of this article) did curiosity lead to their habitation. They observed times of fasting, wore sackcloth and ashes—frequently denounced woes upon persons and villages and often fell prostrate to the earth in their devotions. Strange as it may appear such a sect gained proselytes—and the worthy man whose hospitable doors had been opened to these strangers, saw members of his own family assume the girdle and ape their manners. Whether they also commenced a pilgrimage, I am not informed.

Should these people, in executing their plan, ever be able to visit Virginia, it is hoped that their reception may be such, especially by the guardians of the public peace, as such pilgrims shall justly deserve. VERMONT.

From the Mobile Gazette of a late date.

Several French emigrants have lately passed through this place on their way to the Black Warrior, where a spot will be selected for the formation of a settlement. —This country is represented as extremely fertile, and suited to the cultivation of the vine; and from the encouragement laudably given by government to this undertaking, we may perhaps shortly boast of native wines, not inferior in quality, and much less expensive than those of other countries.

A communication from an Englishman, in the New-York Gazette, recommends the making of Scalded Cream Butter, which is now practised in many parts of England, and by which method a greater quantity of butter, of a more palatable quality can be obtained from milk, than by the common mode. The following is the process;—

As soon as the milk has been taken from the cow, it must be placed in an earthen or tin vessel, and allowed to stand twelve hours. It must be then placed on a steady wood fire, free as possible from smoke, and scalded for thirty minutes—particular care must be taken not to allow it to boil. It must then be placed in a cool situation, and on the following day a thick rich cream will appear on the surface of the milk (which is excellent also for desert purposes) this may be taken off and made into butter in the common way.

GENERAL LA FAYETTE.

It cannot be uninteresting to any American to hear of the felicity enjoyed by La Fayette in the shades of retirement. Amongst all the interesting scenes presented to us by the lively pen of Lady Morgan (formerly Miss Owenson) in her account of a late visit to France, none has more attraction for us than the following notice of the distinguished friend of Liberty and of America. Nat. Intel.

FROM LADY MORGAN'S "FRANCE."

General La Fayette has not appeared in Paris, since the return of the Bourbon dynasty to France. And I should have left that country, without having seen one of its greatest ornaments, had not a flattering invitation from the Chateau La Grange enabled me to gratify a wish long and devoutly cherished, of knowing or at least of beholding its illustrious master—Introduced by proxy to the family of La Fayette, by the young and amiable Princess de B, we undertook our journey to La Grange with the same pleasure as the pilgrim in his first unwearied steps to the shrine of sainted excellence.

In the midst of a fertile and luxuriant wilderness, rising above the prolific orchards, and antiquated woods, appeared the five towers of La Grange Blessneau, tinged with the golden rays of the setting sun. Through the boles of the trees appeared the pretty village of Aubepierre, once, perhaps, the dependency of the castle, and clustering near the protection of its walls A remoter view of the village of D'Hieres, with its gleaming river and romantic valley, was caught and lost alternately, in the serpentine mazes of the rugged road; which accomodated to the grouping of the trees, wound amidst the branches laden with ripening fruit, till its rudeness sullenly subsided in the velvet lawn that immediately surrounded the castle. The deep moat, the draw bridge, the ivied tower, and arched portals, opening into the square court, had a feudal and picturesqe character; and, combined with the reserved tints and fine repose of evening, associated with that exultation of feeling which belonged to the moment preceeding a first interview with those on whom the mind has long dwelt with admiration and interest.

We found General La Fayette surrounded by his patriarchal family;—his excellent son and daughter in law, his two daughters (the sharers of his dungeon in Olmultz) and their husbands, eleven grand children, and a venerable grand uncle, the ex grand prior of Malta, with hair as white as snow, and his cross and his order worn, as proudly as when he had issued forth at the head of his pious troops against the "paynim foe," or Christian enemy. such was the group that received us in the saloon of La Grange; such was the close knit circle that made our breakfast and dinner party; accompanied us in our delightful rambles through the grounds and wood of La Grange, and constantly presented the most perfect unity of family interests, habits, taste and affections.

We naturally expect to find strong traces of time in the form of those, with whose name and deeds we have been long acquainted; of those who had obtained the suffrages of the world, almost before we had entered it. But on the person of La Fayette, time has left no impression; not a wrinkle furrows the ample brow; and his unbent and noble figure is still as upright, bold and vigorous as the mind tkat informs it. Grace, strength and dignity still distinguish the fine person of this extraordinary man: who though more than forty years before the world, engaged in scenes of strange and eventful conflict, does not yet seem to have reached his climacteric. Bustling and active in his farm, graceful and elegant in his saloon, it is difficult to trace, in one of the most successful agriculturalists, and one of the most perfect fine gentlemen that France has produced, a warrior and a legislator. The patriot, however is always dsicernable.

In the full possession of every faculty and talent he ever possessed, the memory of M. La Fayette has all the tenacity of unworn youthful recollection; and, besides these, high views of all that is elevated in the mind's conception. His conversation is brilliantly enriched with anecdotes of all that is celebrated, in character and event, for the last fifty years. He still talks with unwearied delight of his short visit to England, to his friend Mr. Fox, and dwelt on the witchery of the late Duchess of Devonshire, with almost boyish enthusiasm. He speaks and writes English with the same elegance he does his native tongue. He has made himself master of all that is best worth knowing, in English literature and philosophy. I observed that his library contained many of our most eminent authors upon all subjects.—His elegant, and well chosen, collection of books, occupies the highest apartments in one of the towers of the chateau; & like the study of Montaigne, hangs over the farmyard of the philosophical agriculturalist. "It frequently happens," said M. La Fayette, as we were looking out of the window, at some flocks which were moving beneath "it frequently happens that my Merinos, and my hay carts, dispute my attention with your Hume, or our own Voltaire."

He spoke with great pleasure on the visit paid him at La Grange some years ago by Mr. Fox and General Fitzpatrick. He took me out, the morning after my arrival, to show me a tower, richly covered with ivy!—"It was Fox," he said, "who planted that ivy! I have taught my grand children to venerate it."

The chateau La Grange does not, however, want other points of interest. Founded by Louis Le Gros, and occupied by the princes of Lorraine, the mark of a cannon ball is still visible in one of its towers, which penetrated the masonry, when attacked by Marechal Turenne. Here, in the plain, but spacious, salon-a-manger, the peasantry of the neighborhood, and the domestics of the castle, assemble every Sunday evening in winter, to dance to the violin of the concierge, and are regaled with cakes, and eausu-cree. The General is usually, and his family are always, present, at these rustic balls. The young people occasionally dance among the tenantry, and set the examples of new steps, freshly imported by their Paris dancing-master.

In the summer this patriarchal reunion takes place in the park, where a space is cleared for the purpose, shaded by the lofty trees which encircle it. A thousand times in contemplating La Fayette in the midst of his charming family, the last years ost the life of the Chancellor de L'Hopital recurred to me—he, whom the native Brantome likens to Cato; and who, loving liberty as he hated faction, retired from a court unworthy of his virtues, to his domain of Vignay, which he cultivated himself, &c. &c.
